

Mrs. Blanca de Saulles' Great Love For Her Husband Is Shown in Letters

MRS. DE SAULLES SAYS SHE DANCED AS HEART BROKE

TENDERNESS READ IN EACH LINE OF WIFE'S MESSAGES

1914, when, as the witness told she was humiliated by a hotel clerk in London who asked her "Which wife she was," Weeks produced another letter.

The letter was written on the arrival of the defendant in America to the husband, who was then in France. The date was Christmas, 1914. The letter professed love and loneliness for the husband, but the defendant said:

"I was very unhappy and very hurt. My heart was broken when I wrote it."

"Did you really think your husband was working as hard as you implied in your letters to him?"

"Well, he told me he was working so hard he had no time to look after me."

Then the prosecution for the first time brought in the name of Harold Fowler in France.

Dancing with Broken Heart.

It was Fowler with whom Mrs. De Saulles danced in London. It was Fowler, who was on the Lusitania on the return from London, and it was Fowler with whom she danced after arriving in New York.

"It should like to ask," said the attorney, "was your heart broken at that time?"

"I was miserable."

"Well, can you dance with your feet when your heart is broken?"

"Yes, I can and have."

Then followed another series of letters by which the prosecution hoped to offset the claim of a broken heart which led up to the shooting.

Going back to her testimony of yesterday when she said that when she heard of the Lusitania going down "she wished she was on it," the attorney asked if she recalled making the statement.

"I don't know that I made the statement, but I wished it."

"Isn't it a fact that Mr. De Saulles said that he wished he was on the boat?"

She smiled as she replied: "I don't remember."

Glad to Pile Trouble.

"When you were on the steamship Calamara, going to Chile, did you feel that you were glad to get away from your married troubles?"

"Yes."

"Well, did you feel that such life had come to an end?"

"Yes, morally."

"When asked if she intended coming back when she heard the trip to Chile she shook her head, rubbed her eyes and replied:

"I don't know what I intended doing."

The prosecution then produced a letter written by Blanca to her husband, thanking him for having sent her to Chile as another evidence that his love for her had not cooled.

"Is it true that since the birth of your child you were a wife to your husband in name only?" Weeks demanded.

"That is not true," came the hot retort. "I was a wife to him, but I told Mrs. Hecksher, his sister, that I was not. That matter was my affair."

The Rival Of Mrs. De Saulles

Which of These Two Women Would YOU Prefer—If You Were a Handsome Football Player Like De Saulles?

Ruth Shepley, celebrated actress, star in "The Boomerang." "It Pays to Advertise," and other successes, whom it is alleged John L. De Saulles planned to make his boy's stepmother.

Mrs. Blanca De Saulles, now on trial for murder, whose love for her little son, according to her counsel's claim, temporarily dethroned her reason and led to the slaying of her former husband.

up my mind that I would not write to you until you wrote to me, or else spoke one sweet word through the phone. But I have relented, and instead am going to tell you how hard and unkind you were. I did not think that ever in your lifetime, even if you lived to a hundred years, would you have ordered me out of the room, much less gone away without saying good-bye or where you were going to stay. That after a thousand one professions of love! Well, I suppose every one's ideals are shattered, and yours, probably, also—although I have tried not to shatter yours, even when things did seem so hard.

"I hope you are having a good time in New York. It must be such fun to play bachelorette again in fact it must seem quite natural, and the last two years surely are but a horrid nightmare—then so inopportunistly your wife's letter comes! Why don't you race with Maurice and enjoy yourself? You will only get nervous and bored in Bethlehem and lose your appetite. Devotedly,

"BLANQUITA."

One written in August read:

"My Darling Dadda—I have tried to get you on the phone this afternoon, but when I called up, you were absent from the club. Lester Jones called up and he said everything went cheerful and that Tumulty wanted to see you either Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday in the morning. He told Tumulty to wire you, which he did, and I am enclosing the wire, also a letter from L. J., which came this morning just after you phoned. I opened it, thinking there might be something of importance in it, but did not think it worth while to phone it to you. You can judge for yourself.

"I hope you are well and are taking good care of yourself. I am ever so much better and am looking forward with great pleasure to your return.

"We might go to New York together on Monday, and then you go on to Washington either that night or Tuesday, and I return here, though I should simply love to go with you, except that I might be in your way.

"Toodles is very well and everything is as it has been.

"Please come tomorrow by the Diamond without fail. I have written on both sides of the sheet so as to make the letter lighter since I have only just the amount of stamps necessary, and I want to inclose both telegrams I mentioned. Much love from us both and a kiss.

"BLANQUITA."

"P. S.—Have just opened lawyers letter and am enclosing it so you can make your plans accordingly."

Still Expected Happiness.

Another tender missive written to "Darling Dadda Boy" said:

"I was so glad to get your note this morning and as I read today's omen, I hope it would be true. Many, many thanks for thinking of me and sending me that lovely cook book. As soon as we are in our little home we'll try them all, won't we? And we'll have such fun! Oh, what happiness it will be.

"Do call me up as soon as you know something definite, darling. I'm so excited and so anxious, I can hardly breathe. I have prayed all day for you and am sure God can't refuse. Hope you get my wire.

"Just think, Billy got married already. I'm so very and we weren't there for the wedding. The cable was addressed to us both.

"Babe is going away tomorrow. She is going to have her throat operated and it can't wait. So I'm going to be left all alone with Toodles again. I wrote Miss Ethel and told her to come, also enclosed check. Thank you for sending it. Much love to you, darling, and God bless you.

"DADA GIRL."

One written some time in August reads:

"My Darling Dadda—I have just missed you all the time, and have been absolutely miserable without you. I never would have come if I had known you were going to stay behind. I feel so selfish and mean coming away on a jaunt and leaving you to do the work back home.

"Dadda Darling—I've been so lonely without you—you don't know, I have a call in for you, and while I wait I am writing to you. I would have done so sooner, but I expected you to come every minute.

"If I don't hear from you I shall make the 1 o'clock train for New York and join my darling little family which I miss so much. Dadda, you packed my things so sweetly and did everything just right—got all my clothes cleaned. I think it's wonderful.

"Thanks and thanks again, sweetie boy, and with all the love in the world. Your loving wife kisses you.

"DADA GIRL."

Many women in the courtroom wept while Mr. Uthart read the little Chilean's letters. These glimpses into the eyes of several of the jurors.

Justice Manning permitted Mr. Uthart the widest latitude in introducing letters written by Mrs. De Saulles. When Prosecutor Weeks objected strenuously to a letter addressed to nurse Ethel (now Mrs. John O'Neill), Justice Manning allowed the letter to be read.

"Everything that tends to show the state of this woman's mind may be shown," declared the court. Then came the letter to Mrs. O'Neill in which the little Chilean complained of the treatment she was receiving at the hands of her husband's mother, Mrs. Arthur B. de Saulles, at South Bethlehem, and of her unkindness.

It was dated August 2, 1913.

"Dear Miss Ethel—This letter is the bearer of great news, Toodles has cut a tooth today! The darling, cut, weenest, sharpest, whitest little tooth you ever saw. It's one of the middle ones on the lower jaw.

"You have no idea how excited I got when I saw it. I haven't told his grandparents, because I want them to think they've found it and so give him a new dress.

"Father is in New York, as usual. This last week has been purgatory in the worst form. If I were a man I should say '2-1' a million times over.

"I feel as weak as a cat who has been drowned eight and three-quarter times and has but one quarter life left.

"Anyway, father phoned me from New York to go and meet him there tomorrow and now Dr. Butler tells me it would be foolish to go before I am better. I am so mad! Just the one opportunity of distracting myself is barred me.

"Mrs. Hecksher has asked me to spend two weeks with her. Her invitation includes Toodles. We are both crazy to go, but I don't think Beasie would be equal to the task of traveling with infants' bottles to be prepared on the train. Also she is not quite tidy enough with Toodles' things to go a-visiting.

"Mrs. De Saulles has almost got me frantic. I have to use the utmost strength of mind not to pull her hair. Really, I've been so patient and put up with so much that now my patience has turned into hate. Isn't that perfectly frightful? She is worse and worse from day to day.

Invited to Depart.

"Now, she wants to know why I don't go away and keeps on asking me how much longer I'm going to stay."

U-BOATS OPEN WAY FOR INFORMATION ACROSS ATLANTIC

ROOSEVELT STIRS CANADIANS WITH TORONTO SPEECH

Reports that Germany is preparing to send long-distance submarines and raiders to terrorize the American coast have resulted in a redoubled watch on the activities of Mexico and Venezuela, the two Latin-American countries with pro-German leanings. Agents of the American State Department are keeping in the closest touch with these nations, and it is understood that American vessels are patrolling the waters adjacent to the Mexican and Venezuelan coasts. It had been generally believed that the spy system depended entirely on radio-grams sent from secret plants hidden away, possibly in mountainous districts. Disclosures have just been made that in addition to documents that have been carried by Spanish vessels, submarines have also been employed, both on this side of the Atlantic and on the other, in a messenger service, known as being used on the other side at some distance from the Spanish coast, and somewhat off the usual steamer track. Submarine bases are believed to be located at the Azores Islands and the Azores Islands.

Open Line Route.

The American Government is practically assured that Germany's sources of information are through Mexico and Venezuela. That an open line of communication between German vessels and Germany exists has almost been established.

It is believed by officials here that Germany has made a deal with these two countries under the terms of which they will receive preferred treatment in the foreign trade if Germany is victorious. Also, it is believed that German money is being used to keep the present officials of those governments in power.

Ever since the U-93 visited the American coast there have been reports of operations of submarines in American waters, but none of them have been officially verified.

Porto Rico Reports.

From Porto Rico came reports concerning the noting of submarines, but the mission and mysterious movement of these vessels had never been explained until now. Officials are convinced that these vessels have been playing a part in the long-distance messenger service between Germany and the two Latin-American countries, relaying the messages by way of Spain.

There will be no stop on the part of the American Government toward interference with the activities of either Mexico or Venezuela unless they take some action openly hostile to the cause of the allies, but if either country does offend, drastic international procedure will be held aside while the pro-German Latins are placed under sufficient restraint to make them harmless. Since the other Latin Americans are pro-ally, they are expected to applaud such a course.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Theodore Roosevelt has a warm place in the hearts of Canadians today following his address here last night in the interest of the Canadian victory loan. He declared that what Canada and her sister colonies have done is without a parallel in history.

Appealing for a compact that will make for future and permanent peace, he said: "Let us in good faith enter into all reasonable treaties which will render it less likely in the future that the peace of the world will be broken. But let us not trust too much to paper guarantees."

An official salute of nineteen guns was given the former President, and the crowd on the platform sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save the King."

INVITATION TO CANADA TO JOIN PAN-AMERICAN UNION MEETS WITH FAVOR

TORONTO, Ontario, Nov. 27.—The suggestion that Canada be made the twenty-second member of the Pan-American Union is meeting with general approval here. It is the belief that the invitation which is looked for will be accepted.

John Barrett, of Washington, director of the union, in addressing the Canadian Club here yesterday, said that Canada may soon be invited to become a member of the union, which now is comprised of twenty-one North and South American republics. The primary objects of the union are the development of commerce and the preservation of peace among the members.

SENATE WILL TAKE UP ALIEN SLACKER CASE

The State Department is expected to submit to the Senate next week a number of treaties with allied countries dealing with the alien slacker problem.

Negotiations have been on for some time. The treaties authorize reciprocal drafting for military service of the citizens of one country resident within the other country.
